

There seems to be a positive correlation between the log of PAXINTEN's standard deviation and its mean. This means for the period of high activity there is high standard deviation which also seems to be logical. People can't sustain the period of high activity continuously because of which there should be high standard deviation as well.

